

I see no need for the average person to use their cell phones on a plane in flight. There are few if any communication needs that cannot be accomplished either before or after a flight with minimal impact on any person who wants to make a call while in flight and if it is that important, the in flight phone system can be used. Flights are cramped and annoying enough as it is without adding the usually obnoxious loud talking cell phone user to the mix.